SABBATH EXERCISES. Bethel Union Church.

"Nature Advocating the Resurrection" was the theme which the Rev. E. C. Oggel discussed vesterday morning, taking for his text the 36th verse of the 15th chapter of Corinthians: "Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened except it dies." The preacher conducted the argument that Nature, by its teachings, is a most eloquent advocate for the resurrection. The thought was developed, that "it is as easy to find objections against Nature and the material world as against revelation and Christianity; objections the divine origin of the Bible Nature and to the testimony of our senses

On Sunday morning Mr. Cruzan asked his audience for a collection for a new Sunday-school library, to which they responded most liberally. Announcements were made: Wednesday, 7:20 p. m., prayer meeting, with the topic, "Wandering Thoughts in Prayer;" Friday, 3 p. m., ladies' prayer

The morning sermon had for its theme Salvation by Work." In the evening Mr. Cruzan delivered the second lecture in the series to young men, taking for his theme "Solomon, the Brilliant Failure." A rapid sketch of Solomon's life was given; his great success as a statesman, naturalist, poet and philosopher was portrayed, and then the following were given as the causes of his moral downfall and failure: First, his about eight years, superior endowments became a snare to him. Great talents involve great liabilities. One of God's laws is: Use a talent or you lose it. Solomon was not exempt from this law, and his wrecked old age was the penalty of unused talents. Second, Solomon fell through the power of that prince of deceptive devils, policy. Out of policy he married a heathen princess, and erected temples to false gods. The same temptation and peril beset young men to-day to substitute policy for principle. Third, Solomon walk safely upon a lofty height. Fourth, Dr. Frank Cowan. Solomon fell a willing victim to the seductive charms of pleasure and carnal indulgence. Of all the insidious, corrupting, dangerous influences that ever wrought the ruin of man, the influence of bad women is the most fatal and irremediable. Fifth, Solomon fell through attempting the impossible -to serve God and this world. Thousands
